Dear all

Please see attached letter received today.

Given the content of the letter, there are two options:

- We reply explaining Nicola has a buyer and that the sale cannot proceed all the while Barclays refuses to respond; and/or
- We provide an in-depth legal analysis as to why the charge lacks validity.

By sending brief details of the former, this will at least force Barclays to respond in the near future. It will be alive to the fact that if the sale falls through because of its lack of response, Nicola then potentially has a claim if she suffers loss as a consequence (for instance any future purchaser may not be willing to pay the same amount).

If we provide an in-depth analysis, this will take more time (both from our end and Dentons). There are also legal issues we need to consider in greater depth.

Nicola and Nick, I recommend a formal consultation with CRS and Simon Farrell QC to discuss. The earliest we could attend would be next week, although this Friday is a possibility (although we may need to cancel closer to the time if we opt for this week).

I look forward to your views.

Kind regards

Joe Edwards | Senior Associate
