Dear Nicola,

I tried to call you yesterday. I am feeling very sad but hope we can speak soon.

I offered to pay for the independent advice about the CFA because I thought that might be helpful. CRS has been waiting for signature. CRS has agreed outline CFA terms with Simon Farrell QC and will be able to instruct him when you have signed. If you don't want the independent advice, it remains open to you to sign the CFA in any event.

You have (or have been offered) no-win, no-fee deals with all your advisors, including a banking claims expert (me), a top City law firm (CRS) and a QC (Simon Farrell). In my opinion and based on my experience, that puts you in an unusually strong position vis a vis Barclays. Also, Dentons is using a paralegal from Watford rather than one of the firm's more senior solicitors.

I think it makes sense to get cracking.

N

P.S. Please understand that sending emails to CRS like the one below can be counter-productive. If an advisor is accused, even indirectly, of negligence it puts them on the defensive. Even more so if you are in separate consultations with the likes of Simon Reevell.

P.P.S. As you know, you have been invited to the Roberts family reunion this weekend. Tan and Danni are coming. I have bought your train ticket and we have been invited to stay with John and Wenna. I hope you can join.

Dear Joe,

Thank you for your email yesterday.

As you know, it is now 5 months since our conference in November, and the final draft of the letter to Dentons has still not been prepared. This is despite the fact that I have expressed my profound concern at the lack of progress on my case on many occasions.

I have been available since last July to sign the CFA agreement but was told that a number of points still needed to be addressed. I have had no news as to those points and I am now being advised at this late stage that I must take independent advice. This is out of the question as I am not in a position to incur any more fees or to endure any more delays.

On a personal note, I am under relentless pressure from numerous creditors to the point that EDF has now started proceedings against me and British Gas are about to do the same. Withers too are understandably a constant pressure. They have been extraordinarily patient but I'm afraid this too has been stretched to its maximum. These are causes for a state of constant anxiety which is now having a serious effect on my health.

Unless immediate action is taken, I feel I have no other choice but to give up my hope of obtaining any redress from Barclays. I will have to seek to sell the house in order to satisfy my debts.

Kind regards

Nicola

PS: I don't follow the relevance of the reference to Simon Reevell. This is a barrister I was introduced to through the APPG on Fair Business Banking and who I recently consulted as a possible replacement for Simon Farrell as I was told he was no longer on the case.

Hi Joe,

Thank you for your email.

I have asked Nicola (1) to clarify matters in relation to Simon Reevell and (2) to take independent advice if she has any doubts about the CFA.

We will get back to you asap.

Kind regards,

Nick

Nicola and Nick

I look forward to receiving the updated draft letter next week so that I can make a start on our review.

In the meantime, please can you now sign and return the CFA? Without this, we will not be able to progress the letter given pressure from our accounting team. Also, we need the CFA in place in order to instruct Simon.

Furthermore, I expect that the pressure from Withers will now increase. The firm has given some considerable forbearance but I anticipate a change in stance if the delay in sending the letter continues. Can I give a more detailed update to Andrew on progress and why it has taken some time to conclude the letter?

I look forward to hearing from you.

My apologies for the short delay in replying. The letter is still being prepared. It is currently 22 pages in length and contains very serious accusations against the Bank. As a consequence, it is taking considerable time to prepare and, in advance of sending, I anticipate the need to attend a further consultation with Simon Farrell QC.

By way of a quick update, the letter is still being prepared. Simon has requested a number of amendments which Nick is now incorporating. Once complete, Nick will send me the draft plus the supporting papers so that the letter can be completed. I'm on leave next week so will look to send in the w/c 4 February 2019. Given the content of the letter and the accusations being made, it is, through necessity, taking longer to prepare than initially anticipated.

Apologies for the slight delay in responding. We've now heard from Barclays that the redemption amount is c.£7.1m. We replied that we need to see a detailed breakdown to which Dentons have responded the Bank will consider matters further once we have provided a letter of claim. This is a frustrating response, although is to be expected given the quantum of the charge.

Along with Simon Farrell QC, we are instructed to prepare letter of claim detailing the factual and legal basis of the contention the charge has no validity. Whilst there are hurdles to the argument, the underlying facts are compelling and we anticipate Barclays will wish to discuss on a sensible basis once we set out, amongst other things, the circumstances leading to the loan and Ziad's activities.

I anticipate being in a position to send the letter of claim in January. Nick and Harry hold the relevant documents, of which there are many. These are being condensed and a factual summary prepared. Once completed, I will work with Simon to produce the letter of claim.
